Hello,

The California Emergency Medical Services Authority (EMSA) has released the 2027 Ambulance Strike Team Leader (ASTL) training schedule. There are nine (9) confirmed host sites across California from February through August. Each site will offer separate one-day Foundational and Advanced courses, with eight hours of continuing education per course. The Foundational ASTL Course is the starting point for EMS personnel pursuing the ASTL role. The Advanced ASTL Course builds on that training with scenario-based exercises covering mobilization, staging, mission assignments, and demobilization. Advanced is scheduled on the first day at each host site. Prospective Advanced students should review the prerequisites on the course flyer before registering.

Course dates, locations, and registration information are available on the EMSA Disaster Training Calendar — Course Dates and Registration webpage. Navigate to your preferred course date and select the calendar entry for course details and registration information. Each individual course flyer also includes a QR code that takes students directly to the Monday.com registration form for that course. Please direct course and registration questions to asttraining@emsa.ca.gov.

We have attached the individual course flyers for the Northern California and Bay Area courses only, but interested individuals can register for any of the courses in California.
